To Whom It May Concern

I have known Pual Noury as my very good friend and my very trusted Captain for over 17 years.

As a friend, he has always been kind, trustworthy, reliable, and sensitive. We have traveled together all over this earth on both land and water. We have enjoyed the very best of times with laughs and love. We have endured the most wrenching worst of time with the loss of his brother as well as one of our very best friends.

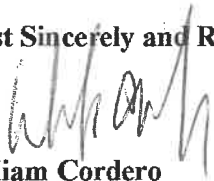

As my Captain, he has always been diligent, able, conservative and safe. We have covered together our oceans on big and small boats, some by sail and others by power. I have been in every kind of situation you can imagine with Captain Paul on the West coast, on the East coast, our local Channel Islands and down to and around the tip of Baja Mexico.

I almost lost my Friend and Captain several years ago when he suffered a major medical event. I was with him, helped him, and watched him persevere and endure one of the most incredible, grueling and extended recoveries from that event imaginable.

Paul Noury cherishes his friends, cherishes the ocean, and cherishes his life. He is smart, fun, responsible and safe when it comes to all of these three very important components of his being.

I would climb any mountain with him as my guide, I would get into any car with him as my driver, and I would definitely jump on any boat with him as my Captain.

Most Sincerely and Respectfully

William Cordero
