Lend a Hand - Volunteerism

Many local non-profit organizations assist the response efforts during a disaster. Please read more to learn how their volunteers contribute to disaster preparedness, response, and recovery.

American Red Cross is primarily known for running shelters for those evacuated and displaced during disasters, but in reality Red Cross volunteers do a lot more. The local Santa Barbara County Chapter also responds to single family fire events, assists clients with long-term recovery needs, and better prepares the community through disaster preparedness presentations and training. To learn more about the Red Cross, please visit www.sbredcross.org.

Direct Relief International works with international and community health centers, including clinics in Santa Barbara, Goleta, and Isla Vista to provide donated medical supplies. They have distributed over $175,000,000 worth of medical supplies to clinics nationwide.

Santa Barbara Medical Reserve Corps (SB MRC) is a local unit of the national voluntary program that trains, equips, and organizes volunteer medical and public health professionals for medical emergency response during a local disaster.

Santa Barbara County Voluntary Organizations Active in Disasters (VOAD) is a convening body that assists communication and coordination effort of local non-profit organizations that play a role in disasters, like Unity Shoppe, Food Bank of Santa Barbara County, and the Salvation Army.

Disaster Focus: Wildland Fires

Ready! Set! Go!

Santa Barbara County is very familiar with its risk to wildfire hazards. Our county makes the top 10 list of largest fires when measured by both number of structures destroyed, such as the Painted Cave Fire in June 1990 where 641 structures were lost and acreage burned, and Zaca Fire in July 2007 with 240,207 acres burned, to name a few.

Last year's Jesusita Fire demonstrated that those living within the City's boundaries are just as prone to the dangers of wildland-urban interface fires, where structures and other human development meet or intermingle with wildland, and everyone must prepare for wildland fires.

This April, Santa Barbara County initiated the Ready! Set! Go! campaign which encourages all Santa Barbara County residents to prepare themselves for fire season.

READY! Prepare yourself, your family and your property. Create defensible space and fire "harden" your home and property.

- Ready! Set! Go! Personal Wildfire Action Plan
- Santa Barbara City Wildland Fire Suppression Benefit Assessment Newsletter

SET! Monitor fire weather, local conditions. Have an emergency plan in place and activate it, so you are ready to evacuate if conditions worsen.

- Hazardous Weather Outlook
- Fire Watch
- Red Flag Warning—weather conditions may result in extreme burn conditions

GO! Leave early when directed to by public officials, bring your emergency kit and provide for your pets and animals.

RED FLAG FIRE ALERT

Red Flag Alert is a national program used by fire agencies in cooperation with the National Weather Services (NWS) to predict weather conditions that increase the potential for large catastrophic wildfires. The NWS predicts the weather conditions and issues a Red Flag "watch" or "warning." An actual "Alert" is used by the local fire agencies.

Red Flag Alerts are issued by the local fire agencies based on specific geographic zones. There are 5 geographic zones defined in Santa Barbara County due to very different weather conditions that exist in each zone. The City of Santa Barbara is included in the front country coastal mountain zone (Zone 1).

How will I know when a Red Flag Fire Alert is issued?

- Media notifications
- Signs are posted within the high fire hazard areas
- All fire station raise a symbolic red flag on flag poles

It is important during a Red Flag Alert that you monitor your local media for information and are ready to implement your "Personal Wildfire Action Plan."
